

This summer oil prices spiked to unprecedented levels, only to fall again a few months later. With such a volatile market, Congress must take action to reduce instability, ensure fair prices, and decrease America's dependency on foreign oil.

We need a short term and a long term strategies for stabilizing energy prices. In the long term, we need to invest in renewable and alternative energy sources. But, in the short term, we need to find strategies to avoid the economic turmoil of rising gas prices.

Read more about the short term approaches we are acting on in the House.

Read more about the long term strategy we are acting on in the House.